John McCracken, B. & O. Conductor, Called by Death

John S. McCracken, Baltimore & Ohio conductor, well-known in Conneltsville, died Friday at his home at 125 Howard street, Millvale, at the age of 66 years. Mr. McCracken's last run was on a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train between Pittsburg and Cleveland. He was for many years in the freight service, running out of Conneltsville. Mr. McCracken's wife, formerly Mary Blackburn of Conneltsville, died about a month ago. Jerry Blackburn of Conneltsville is a brother-in-law. The funeral was held this afternoon.

Never an Argument. If you pay by check, no last receipt—no change to bother with—no needless steps to take—no large sums of money to carry on the streets—just a perfect, up-to-date record to whom money goes—date and for what. For Constipation

MRS. ELVA CAULKINS

"I have gained 30 pounds since taking Taniao and never felt better in my life than I do now. Mother says she hasn't seen me looking so well since I was a girl," said Mrs. Elva Caulkins, 393 Blanding St., Utica, N. Y.

"For 18 long years I suffered from stomach trouble and sluggish liver, and during all that time I hardly knew what a well day was. As I almost starved myself trying to avoid indigestion, I fell off until I was hardly more than a shadow, and was so weak I was barely able to drag myself around the house. As a result of my long suffering I became almost a nervous wreck.

"This was the condition I was in when I started taking Taniao, but today I am strong and well, feeling and looking like a different person from what I did a short time ago. It is no wonder to me that so many people praise Taniao to the skies."

Taniao is sold in Conneltsville by the Conneltsville Drug Co., and by the leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement

DRINK MORE WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat and Take Salts for Backache or Bladder Trouble.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidney will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Advertisement.

WORK AND INFLUENCE OF WOMEN AS JURORS.

If the court, attorneys or the public have had any doubts or misgivings as to how the women of the county summoned as jurors during the present term would discharge that duty, they have been completely allayed.

Women have brought to their task such an earnestness of purpose, sincerity of desire to reach right and just verdicts, and to do their full part in upholding the majesty of the law, that the record of the present term of court is showing in a striking way the beneficial effects of the presence of women on the jury.

In every instance they have shown themselves just as capable of weighing evidence, and even more conscientious than men in arriving at deductions and conclusions therefrom. Uninfluenced by the well known predilection of male jurors to regard lightly or to condone certain offenses against the law, the women have shown that their conception of the functions of the courts is to administer justice and inspire respect of and obedience to the law.

To the extent that the presence of women on juries is having, or will later have, the effect of fostering the sentiment that, as President Harding has said, "the law should be recognized as sacred and supreme," to that extent will there be a halt of the tendency toward a certain moral laxity, a shifting of standards, a weakening of the stern fibres and general breakdown of the social organization.

That the influence of woman in this direction, either as a juror or in other capacities, will be strengthened and broadened is one of the hopes entertained by all good citizens who are seriously concerned lest we drift too far away from the standards of righteousness which in times past have exalted us as a nation.

WILL H. HAYS' BIG JOB.

In entering upon his new job as director general of the moving picture industry, Former Postmaster General Will H. Hays realizes that he is confronted with an undertaking of even greater magnitude than the reorganization of the postoffice department, which he accomplished with signal success and benefit to the public.

He is well aware that moving pictures, as the greatest single factor in present day entertainment and amusement, needs a thorough overhauling and renovation in all that pertains to the art, from the conception and production of the filmed story to its final exhibition on the screen. He is no less fully convinced that such changes as are desirable and necessary to be made in order to bring the whole subject of moving pictures more in accord with wholesome public opinion, must come from within instead of without the industry. In accepting his big task he also accepted the responsibility for an elevation of the art and industry to a higher plane when, in an address at a meeting of the Motion Picture Directors' Association the other day he said:

"The motion picture industry accepts the challenge in the highest quality of art and interest in its entertainment.

"The industry accepts the challenge in the demand of the American youth that its pictures shall give to them the right kind of entertainment and instruction.

"We accept the challenge in the righteous demand of the American mother that the entertainment and amusement of their youth be worthy of their value as the most potent factor in the country's future.

"By our opportunities are our responsibilities measured. From him to whom much is given much is required. The potentialities of the motion picture as a source of amusement, which is necessary, and as a moral influence and educational factor are limitless.

"It is this, and it is undeniable, then just as that opportunity is great, so in like measure is the responsibility. That responsibility is accepted."

Knowing both the determination and capabilities of Mr. Hays the public will be in entire sympathy with and will cooperate intelligently and heartily in the effort he is making to purge the moving picture industry of the elements and practices which at present endanger its best development as an agency for good.

If the propagandists who are trying to force Senator Crow to resign would cease their activities on or before April 1 it would kind of strike the public would be glad to see inaugurated.

A host of Democrats of receptive mood are wondering why an exclusively Uniontown contingent of the "73 Handpickers" did not further electrify the "harmony gathering" on Saturday by announcing their choice of Congressional, state senatorial and legislative candidates. Is it possible that the action of some rude and "unreconstructed" harmonizer in throwing a monkey wrench into the presumably smooth running machinery prevented advantage being taken of such an auspicious occasion to make still more complete the concord in the ranks of the Unionists?

Of course the mothers and wives of the 40-hour-week men at Henry's tinney factory are also to be given "more than one day a week for rest and recreation."

Will the Western Maryland employees be successful in carrying out their contract to block the contract system of repairs?

"Mixed" juries have shown that the members do not get their sentiments mixed with their verdicts.

Having happily celebrated his birthday and wedding anniversaries in the hospital the hosts of Senator Crow's friends sincerely wish his next and early occasion for rejoicing will be his complete restoration to health and strength.

Have aspiring Democratic candidates been notified that there must be no "unpremeditated" announcements for offices to be filled at the November election?

THE RADIO.

Since Pa put in the radio we have a lot of fun. We usually go to my room upstairs as soon as supper's done. And Pa he tinkers with the disc to get it loud and clear. Then says: "Wait just a minute now, there's nothing yet to hear. Oh, now it's coming! Silence there! Now don't you move a thing. Say Ma, this is a marvelous age, a lady's going to sing!"

Then Ma she listens for awhile, as pleased as she can be. And then I want to hear it too, she says: "Don't bother me! Your turn comes next and sister's, too; don't jump around that way. I want to hear the orchestra—it's just begun to play. I wish you children wouldn't fuss, I'm sure I cannot hear while you are trying all the time to snatch it from my ear."

Then Pa takes up the thing awhile. He says: "Wait just a minute! A man is telling stories now. You kids will have to wait. It's wonderful to think his voice is floating in the air. And people sitting in their homes can hear it everywhere—All right, all right! It's your turn now. Perhaps this man will teach you youngsters how you should have a person's going to preach!"

Pa put that radio in for me—at least he told me so. But it's really mine or not is something I don't know. "Cox" Ma, what it all himself, to hear the funny things. And Ma must hear the concerts through when some great artist sings. But when the parson starts to talk on Selfishness and Sin, Pa says: "Now it has come time for you to listen in."

"I mean, on account of Mother—the one for you, but Aunt Jane and associates with folks that won't associate with him—on account of Mother."

And then I told it all about the girls, Stella Maynard, Lillian, and how they acted, and what they said about my being the fellow and Al-Myrtle because I was a Mary and a Marie, and the Lee family, and the parties they had to give up if they went with me. And I know I was telling it all, but I could hardly breathe, and Aunt Jane was on his feet, tramping up and down the room tapping something under his breath, and looking—oh, I can't begin to tell how he looked. But it was awful.

"And so that's why I wish," I looked chokingly, "that it would hurry up and be a year, so Mother could get married."

"Married!" Takes a dash he turned and started shouting, "What's that?"

"Why, yes," I explained, "for if she got married, she wouldn't be dissatisfied any longer, would she?"

But he wouldn't answer. With a sudden little noise in his throat he started again and began to walk up and down, and down, and up, and I thought for a minute he'd forgotten I was there. But he hadn't. For after a while he stopped again right in front of me.

"So your mother is thinking of getting married," he said in a voice so grave it sounded as if it had come from away off somewhere.

But I shook my head and said no, at least; and that I was very sure she wouldn't till her year was up, and even then I didn't know what she'd do, so I couldn't tell for sure anything about it. But I hoped she'd take care of them, so she wouldn't be dissatisfied any longer.

Father turned, and began to walk up and down again, with his hands in his pockets, and I didn't know whether to go away or to stay, and I suppose I'd have been there now if Aunt Jane hadn't suddenly appeared in the library doorway.

"Charles, if Mary is going to school at all today it is high time she was starting," she said. But Father didn't seem to hear. He was still tramping up and down the room, his hands in his pockets.

"Charles?" Aunt Jane raised her voice and spoke again. "I said if Mary is going to school at all today it is high time she was starting."

"Oh, what?" If you'll believe it that man looked as dazed as if he'd never even heard of my going to school. Then suddenly his face changed. "Oh, yes, to be sure. Well, —Mary is not going to school today," he said. Then he looked at his watch, and without another word strode into the hall, got his hat and left the house, leaving Aunt Jane and me staring into each other's faces.

But I didn't stay much longer than Father did. I strode in to the hall too, by Aunt Jane. But I didn't leave the house. I came up here to my own room, and ever since I've been writing it all down in my book.

Of course I don't know now what's going to happen next? But I wish you could have seen Aunt Jane's face when Father said I wasn't going to school today. I don't believe she's sure yet that she heard right—though she didn't try to stop me, or even speak when I left and came upstairs. But I just know she's keeping up a powerful thinking.

For that matter, so am I. What is going to happen next? Have I got to go to school tomorrow? But then of course I shan't do that. Besides, I don't believe Father'll ask me to, after what I said about Mother. He didn't like that—what those girls said—any better than I did. I'm sure of that.
Why he looked so furious. But there isn't any other school here that I can be sent to, and—

But what's the use? I might as well sit and speculate all day and not come anywhere near the truth. I must await—what the night will bring forth as they say in really truly novels.

FOUR DAYS LATER

And what did the night bring forth?
Yes, what did it bring? Verily it brought forth one thing I thought nothing ever could have brought forth.
It was like this:

That night at the supper table Aunt Jane cleared her throat in the fantastic way that she always uses, and said to Father: (Aunt Jane doesn't tell to Father much more than Mother used to.)

"Charles," she began,
"Father had an astronomy party he sido his plate and he was so busy reading he didn't hear so Aunt Jane had to speak again—a little louder this time."

"Charles, I have something to say to you."

"Oh, what? Oh—yes—yes. Well, Jane, what is it?" Father was looking up with his eye patient for him to speak, and with his hand resting down on his paper to keep his place.

As if anybody could talk to a man who's simply waiting for you for a minute like that, with his finger-holding on to what he wants to say to tell why, I naturally found myself being sorry for Aunt Jane.

She cleared her throat again.
"It is understood, of course, that Mary is to go to school tomorrow morning," I supposed," she said.

Why, of course, if it is. I mean Father hasn't said anything. And I was his paper. "Of course," I said, "I he stopped and looked at me. A complete change came to his face. His eyes red, then white. He said then in a hard, decided voice, "Oh, no, Mary, is not going to school tomorrow morning." He looked down at his paper and began to read again. For him the subject was very evidently closed. But for Aunt Jane it was not closed.

"You don't mean, Charles, that she is not to go to school at all any more?" she asked.

"Charles," Father read on in his paper without looking up.

Aunt Jane's lips came together in a "Charles," I inquired at you—yielding to that cold white line that —that she doesn't want to go to school.
It is the principle of the thing that I'm objecting to. Do you really want I will lead to—what is it?"

"Jane," with a jerk Father sat up straight. "I realize some things that perhaps you do not. But that is nothing here now there. I do not wish Mary to go to school any more this spring. That is all, and I think—it is sufficient."

"Good night," Aunt Jane's lips came together again grim and hard. "Perhaps you will find a good enough to say what she shall do with her time."

"Time?" Do? Why—oh—what she always does, read, sew, study."

"Study?" Aunt Jane asked the question with a hateful little smile that Father would have been blind not to have understood. And he was equal to it—but I must fall over backward when I found how equal to it he was.

"Certainly," he said, "study. I'll hear her lessons myself—in the library after I come home in the afternoon. Now let us hear no more about it."

With that he pushed back his plate and left the table without waiting for dessert. And Aunt Jane and I were left alone.

I didn't say anything. Victoria shouldn't boast—and I was a victor of course, about the school. But when I thought of what Father had said about my reading, my lessons to him every day in the library—I wasn't so sure whether I'd won out or not. Really, I wasn't so sure.
Why I couldn't even imagine such a thing.

Aunt Jane didn't say anything either.
I guess she didn't know what to say.
And it was kind of a queer situation when a man came in to tell you that of us sitting there and knowing I wasn't going back to school of any more and I couldn't say anything.

I don't know why, and knowing, Aunt Jane didn't know what to say. Of course, I had not told Aunt Jane, Aunt Jane and Mrs. Maynard. It would be a funny world wouldn't it? It was kind of a queer situation. I was knew what each of us was thinking all the time. Why, I was so sure wouldn't any of us speak to each other or I should be sure to say it what the other was thinking.

Well, Aunt Jane and I didn't speak that night at the supper table. We finished in silent silence then. Aunt Jane went upstairs to her room and I went up to mine. (You see what I perfectly with my eyes. I was living? And when I think of how full of good times Mother was every minute to be. But that was for Marie's sake.)

The next morning, after breakfast
I went into my room and found Aunt Jane sitting on the bed.

"You will spend your time studying Mary. See that you come well your lessons so as not to annoy your father."

Yes, Aunt Jane said Mary polite and proper and went upstairs obediently. But even Mary didn't know exactly how to study those lessons.

Charles had brought me all my books from school. I had a lot to do to when I knew that I was not going back. They were the lessons that had been assigned for the next day of course, and I supposed I'd study Father would want me to study to see.
But I couldn't read. I'd rather read all alone. I don't think I'd self-reliance is a very good thing.
